Biography

Clark Taylor has over 27 years of practice experience, largely in real estate development and litigation. He is lead counsel on many significant real estate projects in Utah for an international development company and is heavily involved in related complex litigation. Additionally, Clark provides broad-based legal services to companies drawing from his substantial experience as Executive Vice President and General Counsel of a steel service center and distributor with operations in the western United States. Combining his litigation experience with his business and real estate background has enabled Clark to handle many high-end family law matters. Clark practices in Utah and California, both in state and federal courts.
