Biography

Adam W. Dayton begins his private practice at Fabian VanCott, coming to the firm from the Office of Chief Counsel (SB/SE) of the Internal Revenue Service in Las Vegas, Nevada. During his three years with the IRS, Adam tried six cases before the United States Tax Court, and managed a caseload of over one hundred tax court cases. As an intern with the Department of Justice, Tax Division, in Washington, D.C., Adam worked on several criminal appellate cases in different judicial circuits.

Adam attended Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, earning a degree in Neuroscience, with a minor in Business Management, going on to earn a masters degree in Physiology and Developmental Biology, and finally earning his law degree from the J. Reuben Clark Law School.

Adam's practice focuses on representing clients in disputes with the IRS involving examinations, appeals, and investigations.
